Executive Director
Commission on Teacher Credentialing

SUBJECT: Period of Validity for all Commission-Approved California Performance Assessments

Summary:

Per Title 5 section 80071 of the California Code of Regulations (CCR) the period of validity for all Commission-approved examinations is ten (10) years. The Commission-approved performance assessments are examinations that a candidate must pass prior to recommendation for a preliminary credential.

Therefore, Title 5 section 80071 also establishes the validity period of all Commission-approved California Performance Assessments including, at this time, the California Administrator Performance Assessment (CalAPA), the California Teaching Performance Assessment (CalTPA), edTPA and the Fresno Assessment of Student Teachers (FAST). New performance assessments approved by the Commission will also be held to this established ten-year validity period.

The performance assessment passing score must be used within ten (10) years as part of a recommendation for a preliminary teaching or services credential. If more than ten (10) years have elapsed since the passing score was earned, the individual will need to retake the current performance assessment and earn a score that satisfies the passing standard for the performance assessment at that time.

Key Provisions:

The approved amendments include the following changes:

For all current Commission-approved California Performance Assessments, including the CalAPA, CalTPA, edTPA and FAST, the recommendation for the credential must be submitted within ten (10) years of the passing date of the performance assessment.

Important Date:

The performance assessment period of validity became effective August 1, 2018.

Background:

Education Code §44225(a)(1) allows the Commission to grant preliminary credentials to individuals who meet the credentialing requirements, including either passage of a subject matter examination or completion of a subject matter program:

“The preliminary teaching credential, to be granted upon possession of a baccalaureate degree from a regionally accredited institution in a subject other than professional education, completion of an accredited program of professional preparation, and either successful passage of an examination or assessment that has been adopted or approved by the commission in the subject or subjects appropriate to the grade level to be taught, to include college-level reading, writing, and mathematics skills, or completion of an accredited program of subject matter preparation and successful passage of the basic skills proficiency test...”

Title 5 CCR §80071(b) had previously set the validity period of all examinations used for credentialing at five years, unless otherwise set by statute or another regulation. At the June 2016 Commission meeting, Commission members determined that the five-year period for exam score validity could create situations for prospective educators that would hinder their progress toward earning a credential and approved amendments to regulations to extend the validity period of examination scores from five to ten years.

The longer term of validity will prevent many credential candidates from being forced to invest added time and expense in retaking previously passed examinations whose terms of validity expired due to the additional time now needed by many to complete all their program requirements as compared to past years. The extended period of validity also maintains a timeframe sufficient to allow for the periodic revision of examinations. This assures they remain aligned with current standards and frameworks adopted by the California State Board of Education, thus assuring credential candidates are held to the most up to date standards.

Examinations for California certification that were discontinued and no longer being administered as of January 1, 2017 are excluded from the change in the approved regulations to a ten-year validity period. These examinations remain subject to the term of validity in force at the time they were administered. For example, the Specialized Science examinations are no longer administered, having been discontinued after the last administration of the examinations on July 11, 2015. Specialized Science examinations passed by educators will remain valid for their initial certification use for five years according to the term of validity in force at the time the examinations were taken and will no longer be valid for this purpose after August 1, 2020.
